I LONDON.

Upon striving in London, in 1872, with his ill gotten gains, Chapman took a large house in the West Endand turnished it in palatial style, and, knowing that he could not be extradited for the bargiary, lived in comparative security and thought, perhaps, that he would not be arrested for forgery, which was an extraditable offence. Chapman was in London a constant companion of the celebrated forgers, McDonnell, Austin Blawell, George Bidwell, his brother, and Noyes, who were preparing for the perpetration of their colossal forgeries on the Bank of England. "Little Georgie!" Wilkes, above alluded to, was an immate of Chapman's house for several weeks, and, it is said, did a good deal of forgery.

Among their successiu operations may be men-tioned that at Frankfort-on-the-Main, where they ob-tained upward of $40,000 from a German banking house.

PRILLIPS, ALIAS ROBERTS,
one of the gang, was arrested, however, and upward of

own and his friends' resources, and as soon as it had been deposited in court to fled the country.

THE NEW ORLEANS EMBEZZIE-MENT.

FURTHER DEVELOPMENTS-RECOVERY OF TWO THOUSAND SIX HUNDRED DOLLARS-ARREST

Captain James Wilkinson, charged with embezzing $15,000 in New Orleans and cleewhere, has proved an important arrest. On Saturday evening he received a despatch in jail from J. B. Phelps, at Indianapolis, stating that he would arrive on the one o'clock A. M. Chicago train and go immediately to the jail. Phelps is the party to whom Wilkinson shipped the packages from New Orleans to Chicago, and the detectives conseen. They accordingly decided to arrest him as a suspected party on his arrival. Phelps, on reaching the city yesterday morning, took a hack, telling the driver that he was going to the jail to release a prisoner, and wanted him to wait for him at the door, whether be came out alone or not. Petectives were in the jail when Phelps entered. He was allowed to go into the room where Wilkinson was confined and see him, and as soon as he started out was arrested, and two detectives searched him while the third went into Wilkinson's room and stripped him of all his clothes. In the heel of his stocking he found $2.600 which looked as if it nad just been placed there. When Phelps was accused of giving Wilkinson money he denied all knowledge of it and protested he had not given him a cent. Some important papers were found on his person. Phelps was then looked up as a suspected fedom. To-day writs of habeas corpus were taken out for the prisoners and the Court released Phelps but ramanded Wilkinson to jail. The money was not restored, Phelps having said it was not his when arrested. son. They accordingly decided to arrest him as a sus

RAISING THE SUNNYSIDE.

THE WRECKED STEAMER TO BE BAISED THIS WEEK-A THEORY AS TO THE WHEREABOUTS OF THE BODY OF THE STEWARDESS.

The work of raising the wrecked steamer Sunnyside, near West Park, progresses favorably, and it is thought by those having the matter in charge that she will be lifted from the bottom of the river by Friday or Saturday of this week.

A new theory is advanced in relation to the where abouts of the remains of Sarah Butler, the chamber abouts of the remains of Sarah Butler, the chamber-maid of the Sennyside. It will be recollected that all the bodies were found but hers, and, as before stated, the inhabitants along the banks near the seen had reasons to suppose that her body was anchored under water near the shore. In lact, they had fished up a portion of her petitional and a bon which she wore about her neck. It is now betteved by several at West Park that her body was raised some night after dark and robbed, and then put away. Her friends have stated that she had $500 or $500 in money and a gold watch and chain on her person, and it is also telieved she had some of the silver plane of the Sunnyside with her. If the body is where some think it is, near the shore, a diver could easily ascertain that fact how, and the company to whom the Sunnyside belongs should take action in the case.

He was informed by ex-Senator Norton that Mr. Betts, the republican Member of the Assembly from his (Norton's) district, had promised to vote against the bill. He knew Ed. Phelps, whom he Norton that Mr. Betts, the republican Member of the Assembly irroim his (Norton's) district, had promised to vote against the bill. He knew Ed. Commissioner Rodwell said he was not acquainted with Phelps, nor did he know personally those republican members who had opposed the measure. He had not directly or indirectly used any money to defeat the bill, nor had he promised to give patronage in return for votes of Assemblymen on the bill.

A LOBEYIST WITH A FOOR MEMORY

Ed. Phelps, the lobbyist, who it is alleged had been the manipulator of the wires laid to defeat the bill, was next examined. He acknowledged he has been in Albany off and on since the opening of the seasion looking after city railroad legislation. He was acquanted with Pyburn, McLoughlin and Fowler. He testiled that only Pyburn alone had spoken to him in reference to the bill. Pyburn had told him he wanted the charter killed, and he (Phelps) said he would try to have his wish fulfiled. Pyburn told him he would give him the appointment of two or three persons in some of the Brooklyn city departments if he could secure the defeat of the bill. He did not make this fact known to any Assemblyman, for he left certain that it he did he would be bored to death by members who would want the places for their friends. He did not use any money to secure the killing of the bill, nor had he been promised any in return for his services. When questioned as to whether he had talked with any member, especially Betta, Watte or Hoffman, he failed to "remember." He had an idea, however, he had said something to Givel "after" the bill had been defeated. What that something was he could not remember. His business at Albany was connected with legislation, and he had been here for twelve years looking out for "RATTERS IN WHICH RE WAS INTERESTED.

As to booke or records of his business, he never kept anything of the kind; that was beneath him altogether. His cigars and whiskey were always of the best and m

"much of a storm after all." His memory was very defective and when cornered he frequently suggested that certain questions had nothing to do "with the subject of the investigation" or that he did not think the questions were proper ones.

VOTED TO PLEASE "MIKE" NORTON.

Mr. Betts, when examined, stated that he had promised ex-Senator Norton to vote against the bill, but not to do so if its passage depended on his vote. The bill lacked five votes of the necessary vote when his name was called, and so by voting against the bill he had fulfilled a pledge he had made with a person of induence in his district.

On Wednesday the committee will hold another meeting to take the testimony of Bob Furey, who, it was said, was made the custodian of the funds alleged to have been subscribed to kill the bill. It is protable also the statement will be taken of the officer of the House, which directly conflicts with a part of the statement made by Mr. Watts to the committee.

Mathew Richardson was a clerk in Treasurer Spinner's Bureau, entering apon his duties in the year 1864. It was his duty to keep the books of the department for the cancellation of moneys or the representatives of moneys, and he was one of the committees through whose hands such moneys passed. Frank Jones was chief of his division. Bonds and all forms of currency passed through the hands of this committee amounting to many millions of dollars. Mr. Richardson states that it 1865 a package amounting to $10,500 was missing and was never discovered. A certificate stating the fact that this money had been lost was filed. This certificate also stated that the money had been cancelled, which Mr. Richardson says was not true and could not have been, for at that time the machinery subsequently used for the purpose had not been invented. As it was Mr. Richardson's duty to make out this certificate, his suspicious were naturally exerted by the filing of the false certificate. That the $10,500 were stolen is evident from the tact, as stated by him, that before he left Washington, in 1899, all but $5,000 of the series had been redeemed. Some time after this transaction a package of $70,000 was diverted from the usual course of destruction by the chief of the division.

ART RECEPTION

Last evening the Brooklyn Academy of Music and the adjoining building, occupied by the Brooklyn Ari Association, were crowded with the elife of Brooklyn nd many from New York. The occasion was opening of the regular spring exhibition of paintings, &c. The doors leading from the picture galleries to the Academy were thrown open, making an extended ground for promenaders. The floral decorations were profuse and arranged with great taste, and the music, furnished by Conterno's band, included selections from popular and standard composers. There are over 450 works catalogued, including a number of pictures which have been ionned from private galleries, and most of the New York artists are represented by their latest works. The exhibition will be opened free to the public this (Tuesday) morning, and will continue two weeks. opening of the regular spring exhibition of paintings,

A MYSTERIOUS DEATH.

Yesterday afternoon word was sent to the Coroners' iquor saloon at No. 58 South Washington square. He was about thirty-five years old, five feet seven inches high; had dark hair, mustaches and side whiskers, and a light complexion, and wore a dark coat, white striped pants, mixed vest, clastic galters, white shirt and black necktic. In his pockets were found an envelope addressed to A. Lemoyne, Jr., a memoranda book con addressed to A. Lemoyno, Jr., a monorana sook containing the name of Dr. Bissell, and a pawn ticket, No.
12,088, for two pairs of pants, from a pawnbroker on Sixth avenue. The body was sent to Bellevue Hospital.
The deceased was afterwards identified by his brother as A. Lemoyne, Jr., son of the wealthy merchant at No. 20 Exchange place. It was assertained that on leaving his home vesterday afternoon he went to the pawn saop in Sixth avenue, and there received $2 for two pairs of pants. About fitteen minutes later he entered the liquor saloon, where he sat down, saying that he felt sick. After the lapse of about an hour he complained of a sudden pain and called for a glass of water. Soon after he fell over in his chair dead.
Several curjous circumstances are connected with his death. At the pawnbroker's he registered his name as "Mr. Johnson," and when his clothes were examined the money which he had received was not found. He had been an old customer of the pawnbroker, although his family is said to be wealthy. The pawnbroker, however, had not seen him for two years previous to his death, except on the occasion referred to. He is said to have had some trouble with his family. Coroner Croker will take charge of the case and his deputy, Dr. MacWhinnie will make a post mortem examination of the body this morning at nino o'clock, to ascertain whether Mr.
Lemoyne's death was due to other than natural causes. taining the name of Dr. Bissell, and a pawn ticket, No.
